You can play as one of three different factions: The US Army Rangers, the Russian Spetsnaz, or the MEC special forces team. Each has their own weapon loadouts and attributes. Your progress will be tracked through a points based system, which will also enable you to unlock new weapons and gear. You'll find a variety of maps with different objectives, including matches that take place in an urban battle arena or involve planting bombs on a map that serve as the targets. There are also matches where the goal is to go from one side of the map to the other without dying. If you're playing in a competitive match, you'll earn points depending on how many enemies you kill or how far your team advances towards your objective. This game can be played from either your PC or from your Android smartphone, so it's great for those who want a convenient option they can play anywhere. Squad is a great choice for both hard-core and casual fans of the first person shooter, as it doesn't have a steep learning curve to master.
